A Charming Love

One of the famous writers John Keats has described how beautiful things can be the source of eternal joy for others and can make people joyful forever. Then the question comes to our mind is that what is beauty? Second question is that, is it necessary to be beautiful to make somebody happy? There are many miserable and suffering people around us. Even if they try they can't come up to the level of society due to various reasons. Changing the situation from worse to good is very hard for them but beauty is that there are many good people and realistic organizations who work for the upliftment of the people. They devoted their entire life for the down-trodden people. They are simple human creatures, their dedication helped poor and needy. Many of these people's outer appearance are very simple like Mother Teresa, but their work and commitment to humanity makes them look extremely fantastic.

Many of these great souls never thought about their outer appearance rather they thought about others. For them bringing happiness to somebody's life and joy to others face is everything to them. Life is unpleasant and unbearable for many people. A helping hand becomes an angel's hand for them. Sometimes a wrinkled hand appears as more beautiful than the hands of a fair maiden. What one needs to understand is, it is not the outer appearances which make one happy. It is inner charm which is more appealing and eye-catching. At times one's selfless service may not become noticed in the busy society not even in the near ones. But it may wipe the tears of many. So it is each one's duty to make beauty in our inner charm. We also need to understand that love is the most magical feeling one possesses. As a poet once said, 'Love can touch us at one time and it can go for life time' love can make ugliest things into the world's most enhancing thing. A true beauty comes when we are more concerned about other people who are really in need of a helping hand.
